Two men were once walking along a forest path, talking about courage and loyalty. The elder, who had the gun, was boasting of his own bravery and faithfulness when suddenly a large bear came out from behind a rock in front of them and charged furiously in their direction. The haughty man fled to a nearby tree, dropped his gun, and climbed to a safe place without a thought for his poor friend.

The latter fell on his face as if dead. The bear smelled his body, turned him over, licked his face, thought him dead and went on his way, leaving him unharmed. The other man came down from the tree, and going up to his friend said, "Well, what secret did he whisper so quietly in your ear?" To which the little man, who hated his life for his own presence of mind and not for the proud bravery and fidelity of his companion, replied, "Why, he said, 'trust not pride,' and I will take his advice."
